He took as his bride the leading woman of the stock company, Florence Stone, who is described as being pos-sessed of rare beauty and unusual ability as an emotional actress. After spending several years in Minneapolis, where his theatrical ventures proved highly success-ful, Mr. Ferris moved to Los Angeles. In Los Angeles Mr. Ferris pursued his theatrical schemes and also invested in oil and fruit ventures, all of which were uniformly successful. Observing an annual custom, members of the District of Columbia Division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy last night conducted exercises in commemoration of the birthday of Jefferson Davis, at the Confederate Memorial Home, 1322 Vermont avenue. Crosses of Honor Awarded.

The awarding of crosses of honor to George A. Alexander, B. A. Colonna and David C. Grayson for meritorious services during the civil war constituted the principal features at the celebration last night. A descendant's cross of honor was given to Archibald Gracie, son of Gen. Archibald Gracie, jr., who was cap-tain of Company E, 3d Alabama Infantry. Mrs. Augustus Weber, as custodian of crosses, had charge of this part of the ceremony. The services were impressive for the reason that only one more year remains in which the United Daughters of the Confederacy will award honorary badges. During the eight years that the auxiliary organization has followed the custom thousands of crosses of honor have been bestowed upon veterans in every part of the United States.

cial Correspondence of The Star. TUSKEGEE, Ala., June 3, 1911. Ten thousand people crowded the grounds about the Tuskegee Institute last Thursday, attending the closing exercises of the commencement season. It was the largest gathering of people ever assembled at this famous institution for the education of the colored youth. There are 8,000 people, including the students, at the Tuskegee Institute, and the other 7,000 of this vast throng came from the cities, towns and farms of Alabama. Many hundreds were white people.

Among these were bankers, morchants and state, federal and municipal officials from the big cities, who always give cordial support to the work that Booker Washington is doing for his people throughout the south. They were not only sight-seeing, but some of them made very encouraging addresses. The most interesting feature of the commencement season was the vast assemblage of colored farmers of the county in which Tuskegee is situated. They began their entrance into Tuskegee at 5 o'clock in the morning and poured through its gates steadily until 2 o'clock, the hour for the beginning of the exercises. Some were brought by excursion trains, but the many came in vehicles of various kinds-buggies, surreys, carryalls and wagons, and many of these vehicles, too, were made by the students of the Tuskegee Institute. Most of these visitors had large baskets filled with edibles, enough to supply them for the day's outing. Those who were not thus provided for were fed by the school free, on long tables spread under the great trees on

An Annual Holiday.

Tuskegee is an annual holiday-one toward which they always look with the deepest interest and pleasure, and out of it they get all of the enjoyment

The dresses, hats and bonnets of the women were simple, neat and well fitting, and lacked the gaudiness that characterized the dress of the generation of twenty years ago. The people have been educated by the Tuskegee idea. Their sons and their daughters have attended school here, and the teachers year after year have been their homes by a kind of extension work. They have been taught to dress in a manner suited to their means, and The most striking thing about this

The commencement services began Sunday, May 21, when Bishop John C. Kilgo of the Methodist Church South delivered a sermon to the graduating class. There was another cow on the stage of the scrub breed that gave only 303 gallons of milk for the same period of time and the keeping of which cost likewise The milk brought $84.80, showing a loss of $14.16. All of this was done to impress the visiting farmers that it pays to buy good stock rather than poor stock, and to care for it in such a way that the profits from the sale of the milk will soon offset the difference in the purchase price. Then came addresses on "Building a Stairway," "The Negro Dressmaker in Her Community." "Some Simple Operations in Electricity," "Carrying the School Into the Home," "Making Over Old Hats" and "Modern Methods in Col. John T. McGraw of Grafton, W. The total value of all property, real and personal, owned by the school and including the endowment fund now amounts to $3,322,374.50. It is a most inspiring sight to see the 1,500 students at work in the various departments of this institution. Nowhere can there be found more enthusiasm for work, better order or better discipline than in the shops, on the farm and in the classrooms of this school. There are nearly 200 teachers engaged in the work here, and it is remarkable how readily and eagerly the student body responds to There is very little used at Tuskegee that is not produced by the students. The uniforms worn by the boys and the dresses and hats worn by the girls are all made here. All of the buildings were built by the students out of material which they themselves fashioned for the builders' art. All of the leading trades are taught here, and the students till the soil that produces the vegetables used by the three thousand people who dwell within the

On the contrary, they are the remaining garments of the best selling lines we've shown this season, and have the close-fitting collars, the perfect shoulders and all the other features which distinguish our clothes from all others.

All are this season's stock—garments made up to our special order from personally selected fabrics. At $14.75 they're the biggest values ever offered, for the saving, as you can figure for yourself, is exactly $10.25.

Connecticut Avenue

Why buy an ordinary building lot when you can buy an entire acre of ground on Connecticut avenue for about the same price, which is the most popular thoroughfare, and considered the finest boulevard around the city? We are placing on sale a tract of land containing about 30 acres, beautifully situated, and fronting on this boulevard, which we are going to sell in tracts to suit and at astonishingly low prices. This is the growing section of Washington. Real estate values are increasing more rapidly along this thoroughfare than in any section of the city. Why buy dead stuff when you can buy live at the same price?

Get in the line of march and come to our office and have us tell you all about this proposition.
